It took me over a month to finish this collection because I was reading and writing. In this book, "Trees That Bear Fruit" by Pete Clark, is an example of outstanding writing with a creative approach to the story of a widow longing for life as it was with her husband and lover. From a living sushi-table and a ceaseless tug-o-war between a thief and an old woman to a person whose job is to talk down suicidal jumpers, there are a wealth of perspectives to be found here, even if one doesn't necessarily want to read this book in its entirety.

All of the stories are 4 pages or less, which I thought gave it a lot of potential to be very fascinating. Sometimes old meaning falls away like a veil.
